

A new logo in the Desco Industries Family

A new logo has been added to the Desco Industries family effective with our purchase of 3M's Static Control business on January 2, 2015.

While the letters may be an acronym for many of the things we stand for such as Static Control Systems, Static Control Solutions or Static Control Specialists, they also remind us of the heritage behind this specific brand of products. The Red letters are to remind us of the 3M brand that was truly one of the earliest pioneers in the science and technology of detecting and mitigating the damage to micro components caused by tiny amounts of electrostatic discharge. The logo also reminds us of SCC which stood for Static Control Components, a company that was assimilated into the 3M brand a few years ago and today is still represented by our modern manufacturing facility located in Sanford, NC and is the primary source for SCS products.

Over the coming months you will see this new logo appearing on products that were formerly sold under the 3M brand. We will continue to use 3M part numbers as before in order to minimize the confusion as we move to the new brand. If you have not been familiar with the Desco Industries companies in the past, we are confident that you will find that we maintain 3M's reputation for high quality and service.
